If you are like most sellers, the thought of selling your home can be daunting. Selling your home is not usually something you do more than once or twice in your life, so how do you know what to expect or more importantly how to get the highest price.

When it comes to getting the highest price for your property, there are two things that, more than any others, will optimise your chances of success.

The popular book, "How to get the Highest Price for your Property" gives you some practical ideas to make the task of selecting an agent, working with your agent, and showcasing your property in its finest light, as easy and stress-free as possible.

The best agents will tell you how to give your property that special feeling that wins the hearts of buyers.

Choosing the right agent is crucial if you want to get the highest possible price for your property with the least amount of stress. How will you know if you've made the right choice?

The advice contained in this booklet could make you thousands of dollars.

"If you follow the advice in this booklet you will seek out a professional sales person – a trained negotiator – who uses the buyers price declaration as a means to obtain the highest possible price for you."

Few agents know this tool and understand how to use it.
